

Cognitive Coaching Is Back!

What is Cognitive Coaching?

The goal of Cognitive Coaching is to provide structures and support to teachers so they can explore the thinking behind their practices and set improvement goals. A heavy focus on coaching moves and communication (active listening, paraphrasing, pausing, questioning) and intense practice make up the professional learning. Cognitive Coaching is led by Michele Tissiere and is comprised of four, two-day retreats over two years.

About Michele Tissiere

Michele Tissiere is the Director of Professional Services for Educators for Social Responsibility (ESR). She oversees services in about 150 schools each year, which includes managing multiyear projects involving 10–20 schools in several districts. She has extensive experience working with urban schools to increase healthy social and emotional development, academic achievement, and postsecondary access. Tissiere coaches principals and leadership teams on using data to inform student-centered teaching and learning, curriculum design, evaluation and formative assessment, and postsecondary planning and preparation. She is a former teacher, department head, senior school administrator, and a certified cognitive coaching trainer.
